Dear KCC Families,

It's been a busy and brilliant week at school. Our students have thrown themselves into learning with their usual energy and enthusiasm and we've have much to celebrate. A real highlight has been the EY productions, where children took to the stage with confidence, teamwork and joy. Whether performing, supporting backstage or cheering from the audience, the sense of community was fantastic, well done to all involved.

This week, we're taking a moment to talk about something that underpins all the wonderful things happening at KCC: keeping our children safe, cared for and supported, what ADEK calls Performance Standard 5.

At KCC, safeguarding isn't just a checklist, it's a mindset. Every member of staff plays a part, and our systems are built to make sure every child feels safe, heard and valued. Mrs Melissa, our Lead Designated Safeguarding Lead, works closely with a trained team of DSLs across the school to manage safeguarding both proactively and responsively. That means noticing things early, listening well, and stepping in when needed. Our pastoral and counselling teams are also key. They build strong, trusting relationships with students and provide emotional support when life gets tricky. Whether it's helping with friendship bumps, anxiety, or just being someone to talk to, they are a vital part of daily life at KCC.

We're also incredibly lucky to have Mr Shah , Miss Anod and Mr Yazan leading the charge on all things site safety and logistics. The teams they lead do a brilliant job behind the scenes, from weekly health and safety briefings and emergency drills, to making sure the building is clean, secure and running smoothly. It's thanks to them that the rest of us can focus on learning. We work closely with ADEK and Abu Dhabi Civil Defence, who support us through inspections, policy guidance and regular reviews. Their input helps us stay sharp and maintain the high standards expected across the emirate. What can you do at home? As always, we see the best outcomes for children when school and home work together.

For younger children, it's important to help them express their feelings, understand who their trusted adults are, and talk about safe choices. As children move into Years 3–4, conversations can begin to include online safety, building independence through simple routines, and encouraging them to reflect on right and wrong. By Years 5–6, keeping communication open about friendships, emotions, and digital life becomes key, along with reviewing family safety plans and gradually introducing conversations about responsibility and trust. For secondary students, support looks more like creating space for honest, low pressure conversations, staying engaged in their digital world, and discussing healthy relationships and boundaries. Encouraging life skills like managing schedules and planning routines builds personal responsibility, while regular check-ins about mental health and safety, like travel and emergency contacts, help them navigate growing independence with confidence.

We're so proud of the culture we've built together at KCC one where children are not only safe, but also cared for and genuinely known. Thank you, as always, for the part you play in that. It's very much a team effort.

Warm wishes,
The KCC Team
